

“As roles and responsibilities in business become more and more integrated, I think my MBTI certification will give me the opportunity to help people understand themselves and one another.”

Global Account Coordinator Uses MBTI® Assessment to Better Understand Different Cultures

Why did you want to get certified to use the MBTI assessment?

I work to coordinate product usage across global accounts and I wanted to learn firsthand how the benefits of the assessment apply to people everywhere, no matter our cultural identification. The MBTI tool helps me understand not only our differences, but also the similarities we share with others.

As roles and responsibilities in business become more and more integrated, I think my MBTI certification will give me the opportunity to help people understand themselves and one another.

What was the most interesting thing you learned during the four-day certification program?

I learned a lot about myself, my inclinations, and things I've known about myself in the back of my head but hadn't given much thought to. What I think will be the most helpful is learning about areas I'm not as strong in and don't put as much focus on – because that's where I need to work harder.

Would you recommend the MBTI® Certification Program to a colleague?

Absolutely. Not only is it fun, it's also a great way to learn about oneself; it helps in a lot of ways. It's also good for team building and for understanding others better as we work together.

– Brett Goodwin, Global Account Coordinator
